

CHURCHES JOIN FOR COMMUNION SERVICE; CROSS 'IS SERMON TOPIC

Protestant churches joined Friday in a union Communion service, the first of its kind held here in years, as they marked the World's Day of Prayer. The union service opened at 7 o'clock in Christ Lutheran church. All the Protestant pastors of the town participated in the service and in the administration of the sacraments during the Holy Communion that brought the worship period to a close.

The evening meeting followed a joint session held Friday afternoon by the missionary societies of the local churches with representatives of each society taking part.

After the singing of the hymn "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," the evening address, which numbered more than 100 persons, heard the Rev. Dr. N. B. S. Thomas, United Brethren pastor, read the first 11 verses of John 13. Prayer was offered by the Rev. F. A. Lusan, A. M. E. Zion pastor. Then the Rev. Dwight F. Putnam, pastor of Christ church, received the offering, after which Mrs. George H. Amick, contralto, sang "The Heavenly Guide."

Cross a Symbol

The sermon on the theme of the "Power of the Cross" was delivered by the Rev. Donald Miller, a member of the faculty of the Lutheran Theological seminary here. Opening his discourse with the assertion that the death of Jesus Christ is the central fact in the New Testament and that the cross was the central fact in the life and ministry of Christ, he declared that the cross is the power of God and that its supreme value lies there.

"Instead of the shame of the cross putting a blight on Christ's name, this device that had been the symbol of all that was unworthy and base leaped into a new meaning as a symbol of light and life," the preacher stated. "The cross released on earth a divine power the world had never known before and the great transforming power of the cross works today as it did in the days after the crucifixion," he continued. "Every life that has not brought itself under the rays of the power of the cross needs a change."

Sees Triumph of Righteousness

Holding that the cross is "God's answer to the foes of good and the forces of darkness," the Rev. Mr. Miller concluded by predicting the ultimate triumph of righteousness. "Each of us must decide on which side he will be in the fight against evil. There is no middle ground."

Following the sermon the service of public confession was led by the Rev. Howard S. Fox, Trinity Evangelical Reformed pastor, and then the audience sang the hymn "Jesus, Thou Joy of Loving Hearts." The words of the institution of the Lord's Supper were read by the Rev. Mr. Putnam who was in charge of the Communion service. He was assisted by the other town pastors.

The service ended with the benediction by the Rev. Seth C. Morrow, pastor of the local Presbyterian church.

Joint Missionary Service

The joint meeting of the missionary societies Friday afternoon drew a large attendance and opened with a prelude of prayer hymns played on the organ by Mrs. S. F. Snyder. Mrs. George Amick sang a solo.

The division of the service on prayer and thanksgiving was conducted by Mrs. E. P. Strausbaugh of the United Brethren church, and Mrs. Rudolph Rosenstengel of the Presbyterian church. Recollections of Jesus were given by Mrs. Howard S. Fox, Reformed church. Penitence was the subject presented by Mrs. F. A. Lusan, of the A. M. E. Zion church and then a prayer for world understanding and community improvement was offered by Mrs. H. E. Berkey.

Dedication of gifts, during which various church projects were presented by leaders, was conducted by Mrs. G. N. Waters, Episcopal church. Others taking part were Mrs. George R. Larkin, Mrs. Florence Grindler, Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars and Mrs. D. Perry Bucke. Miss Margaret Howard of St. James Lutheran; Mrs. Thomas Winebrenner, of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Grace Hartman, St. James, and Mrs. Group of the Church of the Brethren took part in a period of intercession. The concluding dedication was led by members of the Christ Lutheran church with Mrs. M. Hadwin Fischer in charge.

SAYS LEVIN CAN BE OUSTED ONLY BY IMPEACHMENT

Harrisburg, Feb. 25 (AP)—State senators sought advice from parliamentary experts today to determine whether democratic Senator Herbert S. Levin of Philadelphia, whom the court decided missed election by one vote, would have to be impeached to be removed.

Levin was seated January 3, after the Philadelphia county board of elections decided he was the victor in his district by 47 votes over former Senator Samuel W. Salus, republican.

Judge Thomas D. Finletter, of Philadelphia common pleas court, ruled Friday, however, that Salus won by a single vote. Should Salus be seated, the republicans would have 26 votes to 23 for the democrats. One vacancy exists.

Senator John S. Rice, of Gettysburg, democratic co-leader in the senate, said he expected it would be necessary to impeach Levin to unseat him since he was "sworn in as a senator, permitted to vote, and paid his salary without protest."

Republican Leader G. Mason Owlett, of Tioga, did not agree. He said Salus would only need to present his certificate of election to be seated when the legislature reconvenes Monday night.

"In my opinion, Levin could not be removed without impeaching him," said Rice. "It is too late to go back now. After five legislative days the senate cannot reconsider the vote by which any action was taken."

A two-thirds vote — 34 — would be needed to impeach Levin. It was considered improbable that democrats would vote to unseat Levin in favor of Salus "unless it develops that Salus was elected by a clear-cut margin," Rice said.

Owlett said democratic senators might question Salus' right to the seat, in which case a majority vote of 26 would be needed. He was confident that many votes could be assembled.

Two Injured When Auto Hits Tree

Kathleen Edwards, Gettysburg R. 4, and Edward Redding, 317 Baltimore street, were injured when their car crashed into a tree on the Lincoln highway, near the five-mile house west of York at 11:45 o'clock Friday night.

The two 17-year-old motorists were taken to the West Side sanitarium by Robert Hamme, York, another motorist. The young woman was treated for numerous cuts. Redding suffered mostly from shock.

Hamme said the couple was proceeding westwardly when another car came to a stop on the right lane, the driver evidently planning to make a left turn into the Spring Grove road. He said Redding applied his brakes to avoid crashing into the rear of the other car, and that his car swerved across the road, and came to a stop against a tree.

ANNUAL COUNTY S.S. CONCLAVE TO BE HELD IN JUNE

Representatives of all six districts of the Adams County Council of Christian Education attended an efficiency conference and business meeting for the county Sunday school workers Friday evening in the basement of Christ Lutheran church, following the union Communion service. Harry T. Baker, Littlestown, county association president, presided. The attendance was large.

The Sunday school leaders reached a definite decision on the time and place for the annual county Sunday school convention. It will be held in the Fairfield Lutheran church on June 19 and 20. There will be an evening session on Monday evening, June 19, and morning, afternoon and evening meetings on the following day. Details of the convention program have not been worked out.

Discussion on Friday evening of needs of Adams county that could be met by Sunday school activity was led by the Rev. Lee J. Gable, a member of the staff of the state Sunday school association. Special attention was given the subjects of "reaching the unreached," leadership training and temperance. The proposals for a daily vacation Bible school and summer camps also were discussed.

As a result of the discussion a survey of the unchurched residents of Adams county is to be undertaken. The methods of conducting the study are to be taken up with the county Sunday school association and the county minister before the work is started.

It was decided that the leadership training center for the county shall remain at Gettysburg, but it was urged that leaders trained in the school conducted at the seminary here each year organize leadership training corps in their own churches or Sunday schools.

EXPECT RUSH TO PAY TAXES

With some delinquent taxpayers appearing to pay overdue taxes, and a number of others collecting him to arrange for early payment, Tax Collector H. H. Thomas expects that today will see the greatest results of the operations this week of a special deputy tax collector.

About 200 notices have been delivered personally by Earl Beck, Harrisburg, to that number of delinquent citizens, giving them notice that payment of any personal taxes owed the school district for any year since 1934 must be paid in five days or some satisfactory arrangements made for their payment. If the notices are ignored or payments are not forthcoming, sale bills announcing a time for a sale of personal property of the delinquent taxpayer will be posted.

Taxes which have become delinquent already bear a 15-cent penalty. Issuance of the five-day notices adds another $1.70 to the bill and the posting of sale bills entails additional cost.

Mr. Thomas pointed out that today is the last day allowed for payment under the first notices distributed. That fact coupled with the arrival of payday for many workers is expected to swell the flow of overdue funds into the school district's coffers.

3,000 ITALIANS TO QUIT FRANCE FOR HOMELAND

Paris, Feb. 25 (AP)—Several thousand Italian citizens living in France packed up today and prepared to board trains in a mass return to their native land.

The secretary of the Italian embassy said two special trains were scheduled to leave Paris alone. The exodus was underway in other cities following reports of a similar impending emigration from Corsica.

Italian dispatches reaching Rome from Paris set the number going from continental France at 3,000 and said 500 would leave Corsica, French island department, which has figured in the recent Italian clamor for territorial concessions.)

The exodus, although officially in response to Premier Mussolini's repatriation order for Italians abroad, was viewed in many quarters as a direct slap at France.

(A Rome dispatch said foreign circles in the Italian capital regarded the mass homecoming as a further gesture of ill-feeling toward France.)

The Italian embassy set the number to leave Corsica on Monday at about 1,000.

Francis Waganan, Hanover R. 4, was stopped in Conewago township by an officer for driving along the left side of the highway. The information will be filed before Justice L. G. Kuhn, Midway. Waganan said the wind was blowing so hard he could not keep his car on the proper side of the highway.

JUDGE GRANTS BANK MOTION

In an opinion handed down during a session of court in judicial chambers this morning, Judge W. C. Sheely granted a motion of the Littlestown National bank, plaintiff in an ejectment action against Adde M. Spangler, Littlestown R. D., for permission to file an amended declaration.

The same opinion gives the defendant, Mrs. Spangler, 15 days in which to file an answer to the amended claim. The case, which involves title to a Mt. Joy township farm, has been in the courts for nearly two years. The most recent move prior to the filing of today's opinion was the posting of 13 objections by the defendant to the proposed amended declaration. The court could find no merit in any of the 13 objections.

Judge Sheely this morning signed an order releasing Berman Beamer, Menallan township, from the county jail on Monday at the expiration of a 30-day sentence imposed last month on a charge of resisting an officer. Beamer was allowed three months in which to pay a $25 fine and the costs of his case. He will remain on parole until the fine and costs are paid.

Several attorneys appeared before the court this morning to transact the routine business. The next stated session of court will be held Monday, March 13, in the court room.

3,000 ITALIANS TO QUIT FRANCE FOR HOMELAND

Italian consulates had advised all Italian residents of the island to return to Italy within the shortest possible time.)

Officially, the French government accepted Rome's official reason that the repatriation followed the fascist plan to get most of the Italians living abroad back to work in Italy.

Despite this reason, the occurrence of the repatriation at a crucial moment in Italian-French relations was viewed by responsible quarters as due to one of two things:

1. Either Italy fears war with France might come soon or;

2. Italy wanted "to frighten" the French into believing she was preparing to back up colonial demands on France with action.

Diplomatic sources in Paris pointed out that the decision to repatriate Italian nationals from France at this time dovetailed into the fascist anti-French campaign.

The French failed to show any indication of following the example, however, by calling their nationals to come home from Italy. That, French said, would be playing into Italian hands.

(The Italian government last November 17 created a commission to promote repatriation of Italians living abroad.

On December 12 it backed up its repatriation plan with an appropriation of 10,000,000 lire ($526,000). The commission was proceeding carefully, however, in order to avoid glutting the labor market at home.

An analysis of the repatriation plan from Rome said the scheme, like the fascist campaign for more babies and the law against further emigration, naturally was expected to make Italy's population denser.

This in turn would give greater strength to Mussolini's argument for Italy's necessity for territorial expansion—and give him more manpower to call upon if war was considered necessary to achieve the expansion.

Seek End of Spain's War

Both France and Britain were making urgent efforts today to end the Spanish Civil war and clear the way for their formal recognition next Monday of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's rule as Spain's legal government.

France already has disclosed her intention to give Franco recognition and the nationalists were said to have given assurances encouraging to Britain.

In Budapest, Hungarian political police investigated tips that the Hungarist nazi movement, dissolved Friday as a menace to national security, was reorganizing to continue underground as an illegal political organization. The leader of the Hungarist "black corps," the party's allegedly terrorist section, still was sought.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, arrived in Warsaw on a visit to Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, which foreign observers said was to obtain Polish moral support "for Italy's Colonial aspirations."

Acknowledgement by both Reichsfuehrer Hitler and German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels of anti-nazi opposition in Germany and their attacks on "German-haters" abroad caused fears in some Berlin quarters of further nazi repressive measures.

"A few opponents still remain," Hitler declared Friday night on the 19th anniversary of the formation of the nazi party program, "but they are dying out."

Goebbels said Germany wanted peace. But he assailed democracies for hostility "against authoritarian states" and warned that they "had better look after themselves."

A. & P. DISTRIBUTES

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company, nation-wide chain store organization, distributed this week about $1,000,000 in bonuses to store clerks, it was learned Friday.

Approximately one-third of the company's 85,000 employees shared in the distribution, it was said, with payments graduated according to salary brackets and length of service.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW TO CLOSE TONIGHT

After drawing good crowds each afternoon and evening this week, the third annual Sportsmen's show, sponsored by the Adams County Fish and Game association will close its doors late this evening. Association members in charge say the show has already been viewed by nearly 7,500 persons. It is not planned to extend the exhibit through a second week as was done last year.

The large displays of stuffed and mounted game, deer heads and other displays and the collection of firearms and other sportsmen's paraphernalia have won many favorable comments from visitors. The show opened last Saturday.

KING GEORGE TO SPEND TWO DAYS IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Feb. 25 (AP).—It was President Roosevelt's move today in the protracted exchanges required to arrange for the four-day visit of King George VI of Great Britain and his commoner queen, Elizabeth, to the United States next June.

Mr. Roosevelt had yet to approve dates and other details. But after the king's second secretary, Alan F. Lascelles, conferred Friday with George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol at the State department, the pattern for the royal visit began to take shape. Tentatively, at least, it looked like this:

The first reigning British monarchs to visit the new world, ten members of the royal party, and probably two dozen servants will first touch United States soil at 9:30 p. m., June 7, at Niagara Falls, New York.

The 43-year-old king and his 37-year-old queen will travel directly to Washington, arriving in the capital next morning, Thursday, to be welcomed by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

At the White House—a tiny place compared to Buckingham palace—King George probably will sleep in the pink room, and Queen Elizabeth will have the suite President Hoover made from the old Lincoln study. Such members of their party as the king and queen consider necessary to have with them also will be entertained in the White House.

The royal couple will be here June 8 and 9, before going with the President and first lady to the Roosevelt's gray stucco home on the Hudson river near Hyde Park, New York, for one or two nights. Their visit to the New York World's fair is set tentatively for the afternoon of June 10, followed by a motor trip to Hyde Park.

Just what the visitors will do those two days in Washington still is uncertain, but rumors have come from London of a state dinner and ball at the White House, a reception by congress at the capital, a dinner and reception at the British embassy and a visit to Mount Vernon.

STOCK MARKET MOVES UPWARD

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—In active early dealings in the stock market today leading shares gained wide fractions of a dollar up to $2 or more a share in extension of Friday's rally.

Brokers attributed the move largely to "bullish" reaction to Secretary Hopkins' Des Moines speech Friday night in which he emphasized the administration was determined to devote itself to industrial recovery.

Pivotal issues to push higher included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Anaconda, Copper, Santa Fe, Douglas Aircraft, General Electric, General Motors, Western Union, Westinghouse Electric, and Great Northern.

The trading pace was so rapid that the ticker tape fell behind floor transactions soon after the opening. Many large blocks of stocks changed hands. Later the tempo slowed.

The general reaction in brokerage houses to Hopkins' speech was that it was "constructive" and would assist toward business recovery. One broker expressed: "It had some barbed wire in it but sounded sincere." However, several commentators emphasized what they regarded as the need of adding "constructive action to constructive words."

MEN AFRAID OF COLORS; ARMY LAUGHS AT THAT

Washington (AP).—One need only see the army on parade about a capital cocktail table to chase away the blues about how women have stolen all the color in dress and driven the men to somber black and white.

The New York writer, Lucius Beebe, complains forlornly that scarcely a man lives today, except himself, who dares wear the colors of his choice. He says men are slaves who, for fear of the raillery of their women, can't escape from solemn black to powder blues, pinks, or a shirt with a dash of green.

Among the common men, Beebe is like the fox who lost his tail; few others will join him.

Perhaps it is hardly fair to ring in foreigners, although you should see some of the broad-ribbon wearers strutting about at White House receptions. The French military attaches with their red pants and sky blue tunics splashed with gold are especially colorful.

Look Out, Rainbow

But our own army men make even Beebe in his brightest mosaics seem a retiring flower—as far as color in concerned. There isn't a woman on the reservation who can touch Uncle Sam's army officers in their new uniforms.

Dark blue prevails but the flair is in the trimmings. Take a captain of artillery, for instance. His blue cap has a broad red band around it. The red is edged with gold. His dark blue full dress coat has "tails," and the trousers are a lighter shade for contrast.

Down each trouser leg is a broad band of red braid, like an elevator operator wears—but no elevator operator to our knowledge pays $75 to $150 for his pants. The decoration on the tailed coat is even fancier. About the cuff of the sleeve is a broad band of gold, then one of red, and another of gold. Interlocking loops of gold run half way to the elbow.

The front of the tailed coat also is modeled after the regular formal wear, but gold buttons range up either side and gold buttons fasten the white vest. And, beauty of beauties, the lapels are red; not dull red either, but bright, bright like the sunburst.

On the shoulders is more gold, twisted quoits that lay the buyer back $25 to $60, depending upon the weight.

Infantry does almost as well, except that the infantry uniform lacks the reds and has to satisfied with contrasting blues, touched up with white and gold.

Behold—The Cavalry

But the cavalry! Ah... Where the artilleryman sports red, the cavalryman trims his uniform with yellow—yellow lapels, yellow braid down the trousered legs, and yellow cap band.

But, we save the best for last! This is the cape for all these uniforms. It is a swishy affair that hangs, Napoleon fashion from the shoulders to the knees. It is dark blue, with black velvet collar and a twist of black braid as a fastening. And now for the color. The cape is lined with the "color of the service," red for artillery, yellow for cavalry, white or blue for infantry, and a variety of other colors for ordnance, medical and what not. And the cape is built to flare, and show the lining.

The mystery about it all is how a fledgling lieutenant with an income of $18,000 or so a year, can lay out the $500 to $1,000 necessary to fit himself with dress outfits, not to mention his ordinary uniforms, which can't be bought at the 15 cent store.

Hanover high's fast moving basketball team captured its second straight Southern Pennsylvania scholastic league championship here Friday evening by eliminating Gettysburg 41-29 before the largest crowd of spectators ever to see a game on the high school court.

Leaving little doubt as to which team deserved to win, the Night-hawks outplayed the hard-fighting Maroons throughout and never once lost their lead gained in the first half.

"Reds" Weaver, the league's leading scorer, ran wild during the evening to chalk up 15 points to pace the visitors.

Despite an earlier plan to open the doors at 5:30 o'clock the gym was not opened until 6 o'clock when several hundred fans were jammed on the outside. A continual stream of fans filled the gymnasium long before game time and hundreds were turned away. The crowd was estimated at more than 1,200.

Hanover Scores First
Hanover scored first when Weaver caged the first of two fouls. Seibert missed a free throw but Hausenfluck made good on the first of two similar attempts. Both teams were guarding closely and scoring was kept at a minimum. Hausenfluck scored the first goal of the evening on a short shot. After the Maroons had had plenty of tough luck with close shots falling on the outside and rolling around the rim Everhart finally looped a one-handed shot from the side as the crowd roared. Seibert dropped in a pretty shot from the side to bring the score to 6-2 at the close of the first period.

Shortly after the second period opened Fred Wright banged one through from the middle of the court and a short time later connected for a foul to cut the visitors lead to 6-5 which was the closest the Maroons ever got to the leaders. Stick missed a foul toss but Weaver made good twice on single charity heaves. Fissel missed a foul shot and Hanover then went on a scoring spree with four successive goals by Seibert, Weaver, Stick and Weaver. Everhart made good on the second of two fouls to bring the score to 16-6 at half time.

Maroons Rally
Coach Forney's boys came back much stronger in the third period and threw a scare into the Night-hawks. Seibert tossed in a short shot before Wright scored from the foul line. Bob Hartman sunk two field goals in rapid succession to cut the lead to 18-11 and Hanover took time out. Haas, who put up a pretty game for the visitors, tabbed a goal and Wright sunk a long heave. Seibert scored from the foul line and Haas made good from beneath the net. Oyer looped a "peep" shot and Hausenfluck duplicated for Hanover. Everhart scored a twin pointer and added a foul when he was fouled on the play. The third period ended with Hanover leading 25-18.

Hanover went to work with a vengeance in the fourth period and soon had the contest well in hand.

PERKIOMEN IS BULLET VICTIM

Led by Buyer, center, who racked up 10 field goals during the evening the Gettysburg college freshmen defeated Perkiomen prep on the college court Friday evening in a free-scoring game 41-36.

The Bullets led throughout but Perkiomen threatened in the second half with a well balanced attack.

Gettysburg High School Quintet

Stick and Weaver looped goals and the latter made good on a pair of free tosses. Hartman and Fissel cut the cords in rapid succession to put the visitors' lead to 31-22. Wright added a nice shot which Weaver duplicated. Bucher replaced Oyer and quickly scored from beneath the basket. Weaver and Bucher matched goals. Seibert sunk a shot and missed a foul on the play. Bucher kept up his heroic relief role with a foul but Haas scored two goals shortly before the game ended.

Reserves Lose
Haas and Weaver were easily the outstanding players for Hanover while R. Hartman, Everhart and Bucher put up consistent games for the Forney-men with Wright, Fissel and Oyer close behind.

Hanover's reserves proved too tall and husky for the Maroon jayvees in the preliminary game which the visitors won 20-13. The locals put up a hard battle in the first half but could not maintain their pace in the final half.

The Littlestown girls were held to a 4-3 lead in the first half but displayed a strong attack in the second half to rout the Fairfield maids 21-6.

The games brought to a close the Fairfield season, a pair of additional games having been canceled.

BIGLER LOSES TO CREATE TIE IN GIRLS' LOOP

The Arendtsville vocational girls defeated Biglerville on the Arendtsville court Friday evening 25-21 to create a deadlock in the girls' division of the circuit. Arendtsville and Biglerville are now tied for the league but will not stage a playoff for the title in accordance with action taken recently at a meeting of the county principals.

From start to finish the game was close although Arendtsville held a slight advantage. At half time the score was 15-13.

In the boys' game the undefeated Arendtsville team won its fifteenth straight by defeating Biglerville 38-21 which was the score of the first meeting at Biglerville several weeks ago. Coach Charles Smith's star performers, Bushey, Kane and Thomas proved too much for Coach Jack Yohe's outfit. Arendtsville rolled up a 25-9 lead at half time and coasted in during the last half.

Arrangements have been made to play Central Pennsylvania business college at Arendtsville on Monday evening instead of Wednesday. The change was made due to P. I. A. A. playoffs.

Local Motor Club Reports Members Will Attend Fairs

The Golden Gate international exposition—one of the two World's fairs offered the American people this year—opened this week. The Gettysburg Motor club announces that the New York World's fair has set its opening date for April 30.

These two international events are expected to bring the touring volume this year to the highest point on record. Already many of our members are planning tours to one or the other of the fairs; the question in most people's minds seems to be not whether they are going to one of the fairs, but whether they will be able to visit both fairs, said an official of the local club.

Many millions of persons are expected to pass through the "Portals of Pacific," main entrance gates to the Golden Gate exposition on Treasure Island in San Francisco bay, and to marvel at the trylon and perisphere, key buildings of the New York fair.

The San Francisco fair grounds can be reached by automobile by going over the new Golden Gate bridge, or by ferry. Ample parking space for cars is being provided at both the eastern and western fairs.

Descriptive literature on both the San Francisco and New York fairs is available at the office of the Gettysburg Motor club.

THE PENGUINS DEPART

EVEN the little penguins who had known no other home were fluttering with excitement.

There was something beyond Puddle Muddle for which they longed.

Had they dreamed about it, or had Mother Penguin whispered of its charm?

"We've had a lovely time here," squeaked Johnny Penguin, making a low bow.

"You've been wonderful to us," added Mrs. Johnny Penguin, and she told both of the little ones to give Willy Nilly a wing to shake goodbye politely, thanking him for all that he had done.

"So you do want to go?" Willy Nilly asked.

The penguins wanted to explain their feelings without being rude or ungrateful but they felt it was so hard to do and Willy Nilly continued speaking:

"I understand. You've liked it here, you've been happy, you've liked us and we've liked you, but this isn't your real home. I would want my Puddle Muddlers to enjoy themselves if they went on a visit but I'd always want them to be eager to come back home."

He rubbed their backs and then he called all the Puddle Muddlers to come and say goodbye to the penguins.

Even the bears awoke, for they were only sleeping lightly, and came out of their cave to say their growling goodbys, too, and the penguins said:

"We'll think how nice and kind you are when we see the old sea leopards at home," but yet they wanted to go home, and every Puddle Muddler understood.

After the man had taken them away the bears started back for their caves once more, and then changed their minds.

"We won't go back to bed except for naps and rests," growled Jelly Bear. "It's too wonderful to be out in Puddle Muddle again."

For this, to every Puddle Muddler, was home!

BARRIERS

I would tear the barriers down,
Garden fence and glass-edged wall;

Hate of yellow and of brown;
Creeds that claim God's blessing all;

Every guarded border line;
Narrow herds of yours and mine.

I would open hearts and minds,
Nations, tribes and sects and creeds

Till the proudest mortal finds
Heavenward every pathway leads.

I would banish pomp and pride
And the hates which men divide.

No division would I keep
Save the one of bad and good;

Men should learn they sow and reap
In a common brotherhood.

I would have all people freed
From the hatreds fences breed.

Today's Talk

—By George Matthew Adams—
MENTAL ATTITUDE

MORE and more I am convinced that it is the mental attitude that we have toward our work, and toward life, that regulates our happiness.

We know that we are going to be compelled to face sorrow, disappointment, losses in one way or another, and dozens of unexpected emergencies. Therefore our best possible defense is to be prepared to meet them with a calm and courageous attitude of mind.

No one with a defeatist attitude of mind can hardly hope to be much of a success. We have to expect success, plan for it, and work toward it, with the feeling in our mind and heart that it is sure to come—that it will not be side-tracked by any turn of fate or misfortune.

The right mental attitude of a worker toward his job is the most important equipment that he takes to his job. He, who does his day's work, and merely feels that "it will do," cannot hope for much advancement, or even reasonable happiness. Incentive must be well fed. The mental attitude of a worker which is to do his very best—and hope the next day to do better—is the one that has placed every leader above the mere follower.

The happiest people are not to be found solely among those who are in good jobs and who have much in material possessions. It is common to find those who have very little who know and experience a wealth of happiness. They seem to be blessed with a good sense of values, and so do not complain because they fall heir to experiences difficult to handle. Their mental attitude is one of triumph. They do not call upon wants beyond their capacity to absorb them.

A mental attitude of calm and peace, even in the midst of disturbing and tragic circumstances, is sure to bring anyone through the bitterest sort of a storm, or darkness of day.

I like that thought, which I planted in my mind from somewhere long ago: "Work as though you were to live forever. Live as though you were to die tomorrow!"

The Characters

Peter Mallone: Adventurous journalist.

Petronella: His young sister.

James: Their childhood friend.

Yesterday: Petronella finds comfort in James' love.

Chapter 34

'It's In Your Hand'

The announcement of the engagement did not appear in the Times and News until three months later, in the spring of 1936. There was no hurry. Petronella had said. James agreed with her. Both felt that since they desired their partnership to be permanent it must be given a trial. Petronella might believe that she could be happy in England, but find the test of quiet days too wearing. Moreover, at first, she had a strong feeling that events would prevent her marriage. But this feeling gradually faded. By the end of three months, she thought she must have been wrong.

Spring came to Sussex. High winds and cold, were succeeded by soft days of light clouds and bright sunshine. The wet hedges budded, vivid green. There were birds singing in the forest, a cuckoo calling, pale green silver birches, and masses of wild cherry blossoms. There was such ethereal, breathtaking loveliness and lightness everywhere, that Petronella knew she was happy, and refused to doubt the cause. In their time arrived the first bee, the first butterfly, gipsies on the road again.

She felt lulled, peaceful, secure. This amusing, friendly comradeship with James promised to wear well. It could, and usually did, include a third person, without any feeling that it was an intrusion. She tried to imagine herself welcoming Tamara, if she had been spending a day with Tony. She failed. But then she had been too much engrossed, too ecstatic, too fiercely happy, she told herself wisely. Obviously, loving her only in his casual, practical way, as if secondary consideration, he would soon have made her miserable. James, she realized, was still jealous of Tony's ghost. But as the spring ended, and summer came, his anxiety seemed to disappear. The enthusiasm with which she and Tamara hunted for old pieces of furniture, in the second-hand shops was surely enough to reassure any man that she was intending to marry him.

Until her own doubt sprung to life again. It was the fortune-teller's fault. They went to the Derby. Wandering round the fair, before the racing started, Tamara dragged them to a big caravan, resplendent with much polished brass, red plush, and artificial floral decoration.

"We must all have our fortunes told," she cried. She went first, disappearing gaily up the three steps, into the gaudy wagon. "You're not to listen!" In ten minutes she came dancing out again. "I'm not going to marry for two whole wears, and my business ability is going to cause me increasing financial embarrassment."

"That doesn't surprise me," laughed James. "Your turn, next, Petrel." The fortune-teller was a white-faced, bright-eyed woman. She exuded an odd, musty smell of past meals, cheap black satin, and a strong violent scent. She looked into Petronella's face, and glanced at her hand.

"You've had great variety, and much travel, and seen dark days. You have an old head on young shoulders. Am I right?"

Petronella admitted that possibly she had put the case fairly accurately. She was half-amused, half-discomforted by this self-revelation on an unsavory stranger. Part of her mind desired to hide all her real feelings, to get outside, laughing into the fresh air, as soon as possible. But the other part was intensely curious to hear what she had to say.

"He Loves You Truly!" There's two gentlemen that loves you, one is dark, one is fair. One is in a troubled country, and you'll go to him soon." The cry was forced from her. "No!"

"Yes, you will. It's in your hand," the gipsy resumed in her sing-song voice. "Half against your will, but for good reason, and an unselfish motive. But he loves you truly, and though there will be much trouble you will find happiness."

"With—with the dark haired man?"

"I can't say. But I do know you're buying furniture for a home which will be lived in by another woman. Now, for another shilling—"

"No, thank you. That is enough!" "Any good?" asked James. "I say, you look awfully white, my dear. Is there anything wrong?"

"Do you think there is anything in it," Petrel asked, shakily. "Sometimes. Sometimes it's just a pack of lies. What did she tell you?"

"An awful lot of nonsense, I expect. What else did she say to you, Tamara?"

"Well, I took her to mean you and James were going to present me with that desk we found in Lewes, as a birthday present, darling Petrel," she smiled gullelessly. "She said 'you helped to choose a piece of furniture, in which you will keep your own stockings.'"

"Stockings?" asked James, mystified. "Well, it's a desk and it has drawers. You know what I am. And I did rather fall for that desk!"

"Petrel, what did she tell you?" "I—I just can't. It was disturbing nonsense, and I'm not going to tell you unless it comes true," she refused blankly. She ought to feel miserable, she told herself, shocked. But her heart was beating fast, as though she had been promised freedom, instead of trouble.

"Your eyes are bright. It can't have been so bad," said Tamara. "You shall have that desk," James promised, curtly.

As James drove her home to the cottage that evening, Petronella asked him suddenly, "James, are you quite certain you want to marry me? Are you quite certain you're happy about—us? That you aren't a little in love with Tamara? I want you to be absolutely frank, and truthful."

"Choose Tamara?" He stared at her. He answered without hesitation. "Good heavens, no! What on earth made you ask that? Choose Tamara, with you here, Petrel, you can't know how proud I am of you. I'm afraid I express myself too badly. I'm not a very passionate lover, my dear, because I know you don't love me. Not as I hoped you would. Some day, Tony Lance took that. But I'm absolutely content. If you can be happy with me—well, surely I don't have to tell you how glad I am to love you? I'm satisfied. You may be very, very happy. I guessed that stupid old gipsy told you you loved one man and were planning to marry another."

"Yes," He gripped her hand tightly in his. "Then let's disprove her. Life can't be ruled by emotions, the way she would have it."

"That is so sane, and right, James. If ever I think anything else, it will be madness. Keep me with you." She rested her head against his shoulder, and looked at his profile, against the night sky.

For the moment, the incident seemed to draw her closer to James, in understanding. She did love him. But in a totally different way to that in which she had loved Tony. As the month of June passed, Petronella forgot her misgivings. The house on the Ridge was nearly finished. It would be ready for habitation by October. They would be married about the end of September.

Peter's sudden arrival home for a week at the beginning of July further lulled her into certainty. He had not seen Tony for months, he said. He had been in Spain. Tony was, he believed, in Russia. "You're well out of it," he said, both of her affair with Tony and of the state of things he had left in Barcelona. She had chosen wisely. Tony was better free.

Peter, she realized, was unwilling even to speak of Tony, lest his words might re-awaken what was best left sleeping. So she questioned him only about Spain.

"Is it going to be a big upheaval?" "Very big."

Peter had been to Tetuan, on his way home. He would talk very little. He must, he insisted, be back in Spain before the fifteenth. He was flying back, in a plane hired for him by the News. Both plane and pilot were to remain at his disposal. "So," thought Petronella, "it is going to be as bad as that."

But Peter did not follow his recipe for Tony's unhampered future. There were three days about which she knew he spent with Marigold.

As he was packing his suit-case in his room at the cottage, preparatory to leaving again, from the small airport in Kent, where he had procured his machine, he looked up at Petronella.

"Help Marigold through, all you can. She's getting a divorce," He told her abruptly. She met his eyes. Peter bent to fasten a strap.

"Will you be glad when I'm safely hobbled?"

Petronella jumped both knees on to his bed, and took the lapels of his coat.

"Very, very glad. She'll have the custody of Jeremy, won't she?" Peter nodded.

"Yes. Don't think I bust that marriage up, Petrel. I didn't."

He was to blame, she thought, for ever allowing Marigold's marriage to happen. But it could not help to tell him what time had proved to be. She sighed. "I used to think divorces, like murders, were something that didn't happen in my family. I was wrong."

"Cheer up!"

"I have. Because you'll both be happy. But take care of yourself, darling, in Spain."

"I'll try. There does seem to be a good reason for living!" Copyright, 1939, Grace Elliott Taylor

No. 79 — More on Cunningham Family

IN column No. 76 we wrote of Lieutenant Robert Cunningham and today we give you the remainder of the date concerning this family.

Robert Cunningham was born in Ireland in 1740 and came to America when only eight years of age. In 1768 he married Martha Watt in Chester county, Pennsylvania. His wife was born in 1745 and died in 1832. About 1770 the family moved to Adams (then York) county and located on a farm about five miles south of the present town of Gettysburg.

Robert and Martha Watt Cunningham were the parents of six children as follows: John Cunningham, Elizabeth Cunningham, intermarried with Samuel Cobean; Susan Cunningham, David Cunningham, James Cunningham, and Robert Cunningham, Jr.

During the War of the Revolution Robert Cunningham was appointed lieutenant in Captain Abraham Scott's company, 7th associate battalion, Alexander Loring, lieutenant-colonel commanding. This battalion returned August 26, 1780.

THE next soldier on our list is Colonel Matthew Dill and the inscription on his stone follows:

"In memory of
Col. Matthew Dill
who departed this life
10th April A. D. 1812
In the 86th year of his age
Thro various scenes in Church and State
In his long life he passed
The Patriot's and the Christian's part
He acted to the last

His warfare finished, now he sits
On a high throne above
And wears a crown of Glory bright
The gift of Jesus' Love."

Colonel Matthew Dill was the son of Matthew Dill, Sr., who came to the site of what is now the town of Dillsburg from his home in Monaghan, Ireland, about 1740. Little is known of the father's early life except that he was a court justice of York county in 1749. He died in

Mrs. Frank Weikert, Mark Deardorff, Mrs. Ida Slonaker, Miss Alma Henry, Prof. and Mrs. E. H. Slaybaugh, Kenneth Slonaker, Doris Nary, Maymie Slonaker and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Neely. Five hundred was played with Mrs. Neely and Mr. McClellan making high scores. Mr. Sites made low score. Prizes were given and refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hayes Beard and Mrs. Luther Allamong are spending several weeks in Florida.

The Rev. Mr. Sider, Ottawa, Canada, a former pastor of the Brethren in Christ church, Iron Springs, visited friends in town this week.

CLIFFMEN, NOT CAVEMEN
Seattle.—Police Judge James Devin fined a woman $25 for disorderly conduct following a family row, then explained: "In olden days it was all right for a man and wife to hold a family squabble. They lived on several acres and the nearest neighbor couldn't hear them. Times have changed. We have become cliff dwellers and often dozens of people are disturbed when a husband and wife squabble."

The safety board suspended two officers for five days each because they flashed their badges instead of paying for restaurant lunches. The board ruled that hence forth police badges will not buy meals.

Under existing law, several officials assert, the money will revert to the company.

ON THE AISLE

AMUSEMENTS: HERE AND THERE

NEXT WEEK'S MAJESTIC ATTRACTIONS
Monday and Tuesday—"IDIOT'S DELIGHT"
Wednesday—"ARIZONA WILDCAT"
Thursday—"SWING, SISTER, SWING"
Friday and Saturday—"TAIL SPIN"

NORMA SHEARER and Clark Gable, supported by a group of notable players, co-star in the screen version of Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer prize-winning stage play, "Idiot's Delight."

The screen version of "Idiot's Delight" is essentially the same as the stage play which starred Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, but Sherwood has taken advantage of the camera's wider range. In the picture the initial meeting of the shabby vaudeville girl and the hooper in Omaha provides a new opening. On the stage the incident could not be established only by dialogue.

The story follows these obscure people to Europe where Gable, as the hooper, again meets the girl who has become, outwardly, at least, a countess. She is toying at the moment with a munitions maker but she has never forgotten the fellow trouper of Omaha. War crashes into the scene and with a group of frightened travelers the two are trapped in a border town during an air raid. They realize then that nothing matters except the love that began on the road tour back in Omaha.

The major prize winners in the recent movie quiz contest will be announced from the Majestic stage Monday evening. Local winners, if any, also will be revealed at that time.

"ARIZONA WILDCAT," Jane Withers, the chubby child star, is swept along to her best picture since she gained fame as an antidote for Shirley Temple.

Don't expect "The Arizona Wildcat" to be a great movie. It's just a good one—and I mean a movie. A movie with horses, shooting, wild riding, and all you'd expect of a rip-snorting western.

Jane plays the adopted daughter of Leo Carrillo, a retired bandit who (in the Arizona of 1870) is an honest stage driver. Leo is a family man, with five boys and a fine wife, and his banditry has been of the Robin Hood type. Jane as always playing Miss Fix-It, recalls him to the saddle to rescue the nice youth (William Henry) who is hounded by Sheriff Henry Wilcox.

Before it's finished, the picture proves that the sheriff, despite his badge, is actually the brains of all the racketeering and robbing, that Bill Henry is innocent and therefore worthy of the love of Schoolmarm Pauline Moore, and that Jane is a pretty clever youngster to bring all this about.

Herbert I. Leeds, directing, kept it all moving as a western should. Carrillo and Rosita Harlan as his wife figure in some of the best scenes. "The Arizona Wildcat" may not be a great movie, but it's still the best 20th Century-Fox has given its No. 2 star.

Leonard B. Martin, minister of music at the Emmanuel Reformed church in Hanover, will present a tenor vocal recital at the weekly musical on Sunday evening at 8:45 o'clock in the college Y. M. C. A.

Ken Murray Eddie Quillan, Ernest Truex and Edna Sedgwick appear in "Swing, Sister, Swing," while Ted Weems and his orchestra furnish the musical background for the swing dancers.

Wayne Morris recorded some dialogue for a love scene with Jane Wyman in "The Kid from Kokomo" via telephone from Havana where he is spending his honeymoon.

"TAIL SPIN," has a cast that includes Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Jane Wyman, Kane Richmond Wally Vernon, Joan Valerie and Edward Norris.

The up-to-date background of the National Air Races at Cleveland lends modern and interesting appeal to this story of daring aviators.

The girls—except for Constance Bennett, who plays a society playgirl aviatrix—all take their flying hopes to the races in rickety old crates, bought with hard-saved skimpings from their meager lives.

At Cleveland rivalry between the poor girls and the playgirl entails some comedy, more tragedy, and a number of genuine sky thrills, all resolving finally with Bennett's turning good sport to let Faye win the race, Faye reciprocating by delivering the man (Richmond) to Bennett.

Aided partly by better photography than that accorded Faye or Bennett, partly by gallant and touching role, the less experienced, younger Nancy Kelly flies off with the piece's major acting honors.

The men of the cast come off last, only Eddie Norris as Nancy's flying husband having a role of sufficient import to register, which he does handsomely. Charlie Farrell is barely apparent, and Richmond little more so.

Joan Davis's comedy, with broad sallies of the same by Vernon, balances the film's two fatal, two maiming crashes. Miss Kelly's work is decidedly affecting, fulfilling her earlier promise as a dramatic actress.

"Lawless Valley," will be the attraction on the Strand's screen next Saturday. George O'Brien is starred.

FOR the week of March 6 the following pictures have been booked for the Majestic:

Monday and Tuesday—"Paris Honcymoon," with Bing Crosby, Francisca Gaal and Shirley Ross.
Wednesday—"Dramatic School," with Luise Rainer and Paulette Goddard.

Thursday—"King of the Underworld," with Kay Francis and Humphrey Bogart.

Friday and Saturday—"Gunga Din," with Carey Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

STATE DEFICIT EXPECTED TO BE 48 MILLIONS

Harrisburg, Feb. 25 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Economy league predicted today the commonwealth would have a budget deficit of $48,000,000 by the end of the current biennium, June 1.

Governor James has estimated the deficit at $50,000,000, of which approximately $42,000,000 would be re-eligible expenditures.

The league, a non-political organization maintained by private contributions, said in a statement the state's receipts have grown 150 per cent in the past 10 years but that expenses have amounted 200 per cent. It said the state no longer was living within its income.

James has expressed the hope business picks up. He has allotted $130,000,000 to $140,000,000 for relief in his budget for the next biennium, due Monday night, but republican leaders frankly admit that amount would not last for the two-year period. At the present $10,000,000-a-month rate of spending for all forms of aid to the needy, it would be exhausted in July, 1940.

The amount allotted to relief is part of a $370,000,000 general fund and $526,000,000 total budget for two years.

Republicans in the legislature, avowedly attempting to whittle down governmental cost, recommended abolition of the milk control and securities commissions, and also the state housing board. Administrators would replace them. Speaker Ellwood Turner said this "suggestion" had been made in the two weeks of legislative conferences which ended Friday but did not say whether it was adopted.

The republicans, winding up their conferences, invited democrats in to express their views on a legislative program.

James moved from budget matters to other governmental affairs and in a day packed with conferences, announced:

1—A general meeting of anthracite operators in the capitol next Tuesday at 3 p. m. to discuss the hard coal problem.

2—That he was ready to send to the senate next week his appointments to vacancies on the superior court, the liquor control board and the public utility commission.

3—Loan of Highway department clerks and stenographers to the Luzerne county district attorney for an investigation of what James said was a "million dollar Highway department payroll-padding racket" in that county.

4—Intention to appeal to the state Supreme court from the Dauphin county court decision outlawing the chain store and theatre tax act of 1937.

Senate leaders took parliamentary advice, meanwhile, on how to unseat democratic Senator Herbert S. Levin, whose election a Philadelphia court set aside in favor of former Senator Samuel W. Salus, republican. Senator John S. Rice, democratic co-leader, said he thought impeachment proceedings would be necessary to make the removal. This was doubted by Republican Leader G. Mason Owlett.

The special joint committee on utilities said it advised against "ripping" out the public utility commission. Committee Chairman Thomas B. Stockham, republican representative from Bucks county, said it made no recommendation for increasing the commission's membership and had left that question "open for further study."

Rep. Herbert B. Cohen (D-York) said refusal of Governor James to sign general state authority bonds has held up authority contract payments of about $3,000,000.

For the past three years, Gary Cooper has maintained his position in Japan as the most popular movie star, of any nation.

YESTERDAY A BABY WAS BORN

The proud parents months ago began planning for the extra clothing and furniture needed for this new citizen. You can be sure advertisements in the Gettysburg Times helped! Now they are reading the advertisements carefully for the baby food the youngster will need... for his crib and blankets.

All mothers can rely on what the local merchants say because these business men are not afraid to put their names to announcements of their goods! They can be trusted to do the honorable thing in every transaction. It's a good idea to deal with folks who keep their word... as successful advertisers must.
